WHEELING, JULY 4, 1891. Independence Day.

No American ought to forget for a moment what the Fourth of July means. When the day comes it brings with it a special reminder of the heroic determination of the Colonists to be a free and independent people. They had been opprossed and denied the rights of British subjects. The determined to be independent American citizens.

Every man of them risked all that he solemnly pledged, his life, his fortune and his saared honor. Failure meant the halter for every leader, a new and harsher oppression for those who might survive. The heroism of the council was not less than that-of the hard-fought fields on which American independence was won. The victory was not alone for the three millions of Colonists of that day. It was for the sixty-five millions of this day and for allsthe millions who are to come after us.

The founders gave us a country. It has survived for us to enjoy and preserve. Ours is an easier task, but the stake is greater. Fortunately we are so strong that we have nothing to fear from any foreign power. We shall never be crushed from without until we begin to fall to pieces within.

The spirit of Independence Day is that every citizen shall do his whole duty by his country, all the time, every day and every year. So supported our Union is indestructible and Independence Days will come and go while time lasts.

Bad Politics.

President Harrison has friends who desire his renomination, and to secure this end are doing all that they know how. Not long ago Frank Leslie's, of which the President's son is one of the owners, endeavored to advance the second term campaign by declaring the President to be the originator of all the foreign policies, and in the main the author of all the diplomatic correspondence, for which the world has given the credit to the Secretary of State. The intent of the publication was so patent that it aroused the more prudent friends of the President, who were quick to perceive that his in erests were imperilled by this attack on Mr. Blaine.

Now comes the New York Mail and Express, conducted by that knight errant of journalism, Colonel Elliott F. Shepard. In an article purporting to come from Bar Harbor, where Mr. Blaine is sojourning, and which almost cetrainly did not come from that place, the line of attack opened in Frank Leslic's is followed up with increased victousness. A remarkable intrigue to make Mr. Blaine exploded under them. President is discovered. He is also found to be shamming ill health, otherwise why does he not return to Washington and relieve the President of the labor of being Secretary of State as well ns President? Moreover Mr. Blaine ran away from Washington so as not to meet the President on his return from his western tour. A few lines from the longthy article will give a taste of its quality:

While Mr. Blaine rests President Harrison shows his patient continuance in well-doing, his unrivalled industry and his clear head and strong nerve by performing all the leading functions of the office of Secretary of Stato, besides the other functions which particularly belong to him as Chief Magistrate of this great Union.

He conducted the Bering Sea correspondence, which ented so happliy for American diplomacy, he conducted the copyright correspondence which ented so happliy in his yesterday proclamation; he conducts the Chinese correspondence which is very laborious, insamuch as not conducted the cable so much, and the difficulty of getting a correct, authorized translation is so great, and he conducts the reciprocial correspondence with the South and Central American States, besides a wast amount of other diplomatic business.

American States, besides a vast amount of other diplomatic business.

If Mr. Idlane is so remarkably well as Governor Alger, Thomas C. Platt and Stephen B. Ekins make him out, it seems a little renarkable that the rest and refreshment which he enjoyed at the house of his drugbler. Mr. Damrosch, in New York, should not bave sufficiently theroughly recuperated him to enable him to go to Washington for consultation with the Fresident, from whom he had been separated just one mouth by the President's overland trip. But its seems that the President's return to the Capital operated like pneumatic pressure in a populu norm Juliane, and each thin Sign porthward to Bar Harbor from New York Instead of operating upon him like a magnet to draw him southward to Washington.

It is shad notifies to try to rob any

It is bad politics to try to rob any member of the administration of the credit due him. President Harrison has discharged well the duties of his office. When occasion has called him to express himself in writing or by word of mouth, he has done it remarkably well. The whole country without regard to party applauded his recent speeches in the South and West. No friend of Mr. Blaine or of any other public man, so far as we are aware, has sought to disparage in any way any of his performances. He stands to-day a candidate for renomination. Let him stand on his own merits, on the record of his wise and honest discharge of his public duties. If the fool friends who are scouting for him don't kill him off, circumstances may make General Harrison appear the most available man in the Republican party. He is not now the choice of a majority of Republicans, but events may shape themselves in his favor. This cannot happen if such bushwhacking as we are talking about is to go on.

It is impossible to believe that these assaults are made with the President's previous knowledge and consent, and of course he cannot disavow everything that may be done by every man who thinks he has something to gain by the renomination of President-Harrison. It will be just as impossible to prevent the President being injured in the eyes of Republicans generally by what has occurred and by that which may occur of similar character. Americans like fair play, and Republicans are Americans.

A Great Thing for Science. Nature is said to abhor a vacum. An oil man is known to have no love for dry holes with his money at the bot-But the dry hole drilled by Wheeling manufacturers in the hope of finding gas has become the one thing altogether levely in the eye of science. This because the hole is dry, because it is well advanced as the new tea route to China, and because there is comparatively little casing to interfere with the temperature tests. Dr. Hallock, in the interesting article printed in to-day's INTELLIGENCER, dwells enthusiastically on the great value of this well and congratulates Wheeling on her enterprise and good fortune.

Gas would have been a good thing. So would oil. It may turn out that the results from this well will be of more practical value than the greatest gasser or the most voluminous gusher in the

ONCE more the open switch is responsible for a terrible slaughter. There has rarely been a more shocking railroad disaster. The freight train engineer seems to have done all he could to avert the calamity, but he had not a fair chance. The passenger train men, knowing they were behind time and that the fast freight was coming, should have flagged it in time. The calamity appears to have been of the preventable kind. This being true the time is opportune to administer a rebuke that will count for something.

Ir the United States officers can catch the big fish of the missing short-term concern they will give the law a chance to see what it can do with them. Some lawyers have expressed the opinion that the operators have been shrewd enough to carry on their confidence game without placing themselves within reach of the law. It is worth while to know how the case stands.

In 1876 the fathers of the Republic solemnly resolved that Americans should manufacture what they pleased in their own country. This was a part of the Declaration of Independence and it is more significent to-day than ever. Political independence with industrial dependence would be an absurdity, and it is just the condition sought by free traders.

THE toy pistol began to celebrate early by sending a ball into a little Wheeling boy's foot. The sale of the so-called toy pistol should be prohibited under heavy penalties, including responsibility for any accident such as that of last night. That would end a disorderly and destructive career.

WEST VIRGINIA is honored to-day by the presence of two celebrated cabinet officers celebrating. At Elkins they will see something of the developing State they have been hearing about. They may like it well enough to come in and grow up with the country.

HAVE a good time to-day, young peo ple, and don't interfere with anybody else who is having his own good time in his own lawful way. Remember, among other things, that horses are not overly fond of having fire crackers

THE dynamite firecracker took off a Wheeling man's thumb before the Fourth of July got here. The law should prohibit dynamite as a plaything. Powder makes enough noise and is dangerous enough.

Way hasn't some free trader suggested that we can't make aluminum in this country, because we haven't got the raw material you know?

You and your giant firecracker are "all right" this morning, dear child, but where will you both be when the sun goes down?

THOSE of the INTELLIGENCER'S renders who took its good advice are not mourning any short-term order funerals.

WHERLING'S Fourth opened with full force. The noise was unprecedented, and the casualties led off strong.

Ir you can spend the day in the country you won't have to stuff your ears in order to save them.

ANOTHER OIL STRIKE.

Marion County People Excited Over a New Territory.

FAIRMONT, W. VA., July 3 .- Referring to the South Penn Company's strike on the Dodd farm, the Index to-day says: The people in the upper end of the county are much excited over the strike of oil made by the South Penn Company in their well on the Dodd farm on State Fork, which is about two miles west of Metz station, on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. More than a year ago this company commenced a well on that company commenced a well on that farm, intending to bore down to the Gordon sand, but this well had to be abandoned on account of a series of misfortunes. Later they commenced a second well, and about ten days ago struck oil in the Big Injun, which has set the neighborhood on fire. There was little or no expectation of getting oil in this sand and the company was not prepared to save it, consequently considerable of the fluid wasted. The well is variously estimated, and the citizens place it all the way up to 800 barrels per day, while it is said the South Penn people fix its capacity as low as five barrels per while it is said the South Felin perfect fix its capacity as low as five barrels per day, but disinterested men tell us that it is a good twenty-five barrel well and may do more. Since the strike the well has been fastened in and no one knows or can judge of its capacity. The oil is said to be much lighter than that found at Mannington, and many think that a new field has been discovered. Be that as it may be it has created much excitement in that quarter and oil leases have been eagerly sought after. Land lying near the new well has been leased and some good bonuses have been paid. This shows that the whole of Mannington district is a great oil field.

RIGHT OF COUNCILS

To Summon Yard Upheld by the Court Need Not Incriminate Himself. PHILADELPHIA, PA., July 3.-Presiding Judge Allison, of the court of common pleas, this morning handed down a derision of the court upholding the au-shority of the city councils to appoint committee vested with power to subcommittee vested with power to subport a witnesses and place them under oath before receiving their testimony. The decision of the court arose through a suit in equity brought against Henry H. Yard, who refused to be sworn or to testify before the Keystone Bank investigating committee. The refusal of Yard to be sworn, and the subsequent entering of a suit by the city solicitor to compel him to submit to being sworn, raised a very delicate question of constitutional law. Yard has been indicted by the grand jury for criminal conspiracy with ex-City Treasurer Bardsley to unlawfully use the public funds. The contention of Yard's counsel, in their arguments before the Court of Common Pleas, was that city councils their arguments before the Court of Common Pleas, was that city councils had no authority to appoint a committee vested with powers to compel citizens to appear before them and testify under oath, and that in addition, under the constitution of the United States, the constitution of the United States, every man is guaranteed the right to answer no questions before a tribunal of justice that will tend to criminate himself. The opinion of the crourt in the right of the councils te appoint the committee was that Yard must appear before that committee and submit himself to being sworn, but under the bill of rights he could refuse to answer any questions that he thought would incriminate himself. criminate himself.

The remedy of the committee then is to appeal to the courts to submit to them the questions asked Yard, and the court will decide whether they are of a nature to incriminate him.
